Three hunters, Solomon Oldfield, William Gibbs, and John Trout, came to their death by poisoning in a singular manner at Koney's Creek, West Virginia, last week. They, with Richard Dollard, went out on a mountain to hunt, it being their intention to remain out several days, and had with them the usual camp supplies. The next morning they prepared breakfast, making coffee in an old kettle. They all drank the coffee except Dollard. Soon after all three were taken ill. Dollard rushed off for aid. On his return the three men are reported to have been dead. An investigation was at once instituted, which resulted in the finding of a copperhead snake in the kettle. The reptile doubtless crawled unnoticed into the vessel while the coffee was cooking.

Her remains were laid to rest in Whips Cove cemetery Friday where a large number of friends and relatives witnessed the funeral services which were conducted by Rev. A. W. May. She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, W. C. and S. E. McKee, and three grand children, six brothers—Uriah, Cornelius, Boston, James, Samuel and Moses Diehl, all of Whips Cove, and a host of warm friends. While Mrs. McKee was a mother to all, she was generally known as aunt Sallie. She was always ready to administer aid at the bedside of the sick, was a grateful neighbor—charitable to the poor, and a consistent member of the Christian church from youth up. Aunt Sallie will be missed by all.

CENTER EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Resolutions of Respect on the death of George W. Miller who died Nov. 12, 1899.
Whereas, in the providence of Almighty God, it having seemed good unto Him to call our brother, George W. Miller, from our midst,
Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy and prayers to our beloved sister in this her dark hour of bereavement, knowing that the Lord's ways are past finding out, and that all things work for good to them who are the children of God; and what seemeth dark and mysterious unto us is simply the gateway to perfect happiness beyond this life. It is only through great tribulation we shall ever enter the kingdom of heaven.
That we further extend our acts of condolence to the beloved wife and little boy and each relative of the deceased, praying that they sorrow not as those having no hope.
Whilst we deeply mourn the loss of our beloved brother, yet we hope our loss is his eternal gain. Whilst his voice is silent to us, his spirit has gone to God who gave it. He giveth and he taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.
Then let us as a society, and they as a family, so live and so walk that when the summons comes to call us to a better home, it may find us on our watch tower waiting and longing to go; and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved wife as a mark of our love and esteem for our brother who has gone from us.
Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the son of man cometh.

S. C. GRACEY,
MYRTLE WITTER,

Those present were Misses Etta and Elsie Wagner, Susie and Laura Myers, Maria Long, Mamie Fore and Daisy Polk, and Messrs. Charles and George Glunt, Cyrus Wagner, Dwight Polk, Albert Kerlin. The house was brilliantly lighted. Near ten o'clock the party was invited to the dining room for refreshments. About midnight, both ladies and gentlemen gathered around their hostess and were unanimous in their expressions of a pleasant evening.

VICE PRESIDENT DEAD.

Garret A. Hobart, Vice-President of the United States, died at his home in Paterson, New Jersey, on Tuesday morning from heart failure. He had been sick a long time.

What seems impossible happened one day last week on the Southwest railroad. While a heavy freight train of ninety cars was coming from Everson to Watt, two cars were swung around a curve and jumped the track, going over an embankment and alighting at the edge of a trestle at Pennsville. The cars had the patent couplers and the balance of the train went on without any interruption except a severe jolt, the couplers catching up and connecting the sections of the train perfectly. The two cars were not known to be lost until the train got to Watt, where the conductor noticed the loss. Later the cars were found at Pennsville.

A sad accident happened Monday afternoon about four miles from Gettysburg, when the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Reinecker fell into a mill race and was drowned. The little fellow followed his father to the mill unknown to him. When the latter returned to the house the boy was missed, and after a search the body was found in the race.
